Snips from Snappy Lady

Howdy Folks,

I know it's been a while since you heard from me and it will be awhile until you hear from me again. Life happens, and I am going in for another operation on my arm. It will take me a few months "again" of therapy until I can type. Hopefully, no ...God willing I'll have full use of my arm when all this is said and done. At least I'll have most of the metal out of my arm, that will keep me from setting off alarms everywhere I go.

Nothing like being unable to do anything physical to give you incentive to read. I do like to read and I read a lot. Sometimes it's novels, sometimes it's news blips on facebook; but so many people know that I like old information the best that I've been given old magazines that date back to the early sixties and seventies. I have been going over a couple of copies of Pennsylvania Folklife, which is a magazine oddly enough about Amish life; like, who knew. Well, the three copies I have are from 1963 and I've found a few unique tidbits of information. For example, we all know from movies and pictures etc the image of the Conestoga wagon right? And I'm sure we all can recall the wooden bucket that hung from the back somewhere around the back wheel. Well I, and most everyone else I've spoken to think that that bucket was for water, sort of like a spare bucket that just was hanging around in case you needed a bucket for anything, right? Wrong. That bucket actually contained Pine Tar. Yep, Pine Tar. Pine Tar that was used for lubing the wheels or, as I found out, for medical needs. Did you know that if you are suffering from upper respiratory ailments from cough to pneumonia to asthma Pine Tar, taken in pure droplet form for cough or inhaled in cases of asthma can cure these problems. Even used on livestock it can cure the animal. I read about a farmer curing a horse of pneumonia. I didn't even know horses could "get" pneumonia, but hey learn something new.

The extraction method of getting the tar out of the wood was passed down from the Indians and was widely used before the age of modern pharmaceuticals. The extraction is dangerous if you don't know what you're doing but I have the information, in case anyone is curious enough to try.

What's going to happen once I die with all this accumulated information is beyond me. My kids will probably start fires with it, who knows, but for now it's in my collection of possible end of the world as we know it, need to know this, information. In case anyone is interested.....hello.....anyone out there???

One other article that I read was about, of all things, outhouses. Five pages of information in the magazine. Who would have thought there would be so much to know about shit houses. Well, Dutch maybe, but he was a plumber so he doesn't really count.

One tidbit that I will pass on, and by the way, if we no longer have the whole running water cus the power is out scenarios; my information about how to build and where to dig and what to dig and how deep etc etc might come in handy. Anyway, back to the tidbit. We all have in mind the wooden slatted outhouse with the crescent moon on the door; well yes the cut out moon was for light and the all important AIR but I found out that the cut out shapes in the door were really forerunners of our "gender" signs. Yep, the Crescent moon was for Women and a Star often was the Men's sign. See the important information you can gather from me....I know after reading this you'll say I'm full of sh....

Well, hope you all enjoyed my rambling once again. Hopefully I'll have cleaned up my information for the next time.

Adios for now.
